Director's Note

When you think about high school, a flood of memories will come back to you. You immediately think about the clique you were a part of. Were you a Plastic? A band geek? In the show choir? A Mathlete? A jock? Or were you the new kid trying to navigate the halls of a brand-new social jungle?

Regardless of where you belonged, you experienced a lot. When we started the process of thinking about our production of Mean Girls and the message we wanted to send, one thing resonated: WE SEE YOU. In today's world of technology, we navigate numerous worlds, some benefit you, and some are harmful. One element remains, we all want to be accepted into a group and be seen for who we are. High school students constantly change their styles, trying on clothes as they work through their self-discovery journey to identify who they are as humans.

We have worked very hard at meeting our actors where they are and seeing them for who they are. We have grown together in our understanding of ourselves and our craft. It is surprisingly difficult for teenagers to play stereotypes of themselves on stage. Our actors and crew have worked hard to bring audiences one of the best shows possible. We hope you see yourself on stage and remember your high school days fondly.

And as a final note: YOU are so real, YOU are so rare, WE see YOU there, WE SEE YOU!

Thank you for spending time at North Shore High School. Class is dismissed.

Renee Newlove Adrian Ocegueda
